Forecast For The United Kingdom
Issued by Met Office Exeter
at 0400 on Thursday 20 May 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Wet, windy, cool weather for many today and Friday.

Today:
Although some parts start bright and chilly, rain moves northeastwards across many areas, heavy for parts of the west, especially hills. A few brighter spells in southwestern areas this afternoon. Cool and windy for most, gales in coastal west.

Tonight:
Gales, possibly severe, affecting some southwestern coastal areas, with strong winds inland across the south. Further rain at times for most areas, heavy in places. Less chilly than preceding night.

Friday:
A few brighter interludes but the emphasis on cloud, wind and spells of rain, heavy in a few areas, especially over hills in the southwest and northeast. Feeling distinctly cool.

Outlook for Saturday to Monday:
Sunshine and scattered showers on Saturday. Cloud, rain and stronger winds moving east on Sunday followed by further showers, locally heavy with thunder on Monday. Rather cool.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.